Programme Overview

Building resilient organisations through strategic identification and adaptation of business to current and future trends is one strategy to establish future sustainable business in this precarious climate. Companies that are successful always strive to innovate and stay ahead of the learning curve to disrupt the status quo. To keep ahead of the competition and industry developments, it forces staff members to think creatively and strategically. To find the right answers for a variety of business difficulties, this program intends to stimulate corporate strategies and leadership skills. It combines theory with real-world application by using case studies and discussions to explain management ideas across a range of company activities. At the end of the program the participants will have the necessary skills to address business challenges in a fast-paced, disruptive workplace.
